Hello again, Everyone,

We're still following the construction of Victoria's first major railway line as it makes its way from Melbourne towards Sandhurst [Bendigo], in early 1862. On 22 February that year, the Argus speculated that the portion of the line between Malmsbury and Sandhurst might be ready for an official opening by July. However, the gold towns of Victoria's central west were still agitating for change, and the article went on to state that: -"A question has been raised in the country districts as to whether the balance of the railway loan fund should be expended on the extension of the Murray River line northwards from Sandhurst, or on branch lines such as that proposed between Castlemaine and Maryborough, a doubt having been expressed as to whether the amount available from the loan will be sufficient to complete the Murray River line to Echuca." That question was immediately settled, as the article continued: - "Mr O'Shanassy [then the Premier of Victoria] has stated, however, on the part of the Government, that the country is pledged to complete the line to Echuca. The gradients between Sandhurst and the Murray, it may be remarked, are of the most favourable character, the country being almost a dead level between the two points." By 23 April, 1862, the line was completed to Kyneton, nearly three months ahead of the anticipated date, but from that time forward the works were delayed.

A change in the weather had been "anxiously looked for by owners of stock and miners, dependent upon rains for their water supply," according to a report in the Sydney Morning Herald earlier that week. In some districts, including Sandhurst, the report stated, the puddlers had been without water "for a length of time," and some of the quartz-mills had been stopped for weeks and even months. For these people in particular, "a few days of heavy rain would bring a large quantity of gold into the market and give a fillip to the industry of the country."

However, the change in the weather was not good news for everyone. After so many delays encountered in the construction of the Melbourne to Sandhurst railway line – delays that had been caused by human intervention – which had been overcome, now the "unprecedented rains" caused a delay that was beyond anyone's control. Nevertheless, progress continued to be made and, on 25 June, 1862, the Argus reported that the Taradale viaduct was almost finished and the Big-Hill tunnel was "keyed-in," but work was being slowed by the severity of the weather. With the Melbourne to Ballarat rail link having been completed and opened by 10 April that year, the people of Sandhurst, at least according to the Bendigo Advertiser, were feeling a little hard-done-by.

An article published by the Advertiser, on 24 July, 1862, expressed something of their frustration. In part, it read: - "Not only has too much rain the effect of making our town look dull and miserable, but also of checking the usual gold-producing industry of the place; a general dullness in trade of all descriptions is the result. The inclemency of the weather has had another evil result: it has delayed much longer the projected opening of the railway line. We must now be content to accept the excuse of the Government —which they will be too ready to seize on—that the wet weather will probably delay the opening of the line before another three months. That the Government, in this matter of not completing the railway sooner, have been treating the people of this district with some neglect, is the universal complaint, especially when we see the line finished so much earlier to Ballarat, a place, if as important, certainly not beyond Sandhurst as a goldfields town."

However, as the article proceeded, its tone became a little more optimistic. "The completion of the line to Melbourne, and the consequent increase of traffic between Sandhurst and that place, will no doubt greatly benefit the present rather depressed state of business in the district. The bill for the extension of the line from Sandhurst to the Murray has passed the Legislature of the colony, and the works will probably be commenced in about three months. The completion of this branch of the railway will also, it is expected, be of great advantage to Sandhurst." With the bill having been passed, the northward extension of the line was now on a secure footing and the people of Sandhurst resigned themselves to wait a further three months for their connection with Melbourne.

was finally completed; "the Murray River Railway had now been carried a distance of 101 miles from Melbourne." The grand opening day arrived - Two grand opening days; one for Castlemaine on 15 October, and one for Sandhurst on 20 October. "It was originally intended to make one day suffice for the rejoicings consequent on the opening of the newlycompleted portion of the Murray River Railway onwards from Kyneton to Castlemaine and Sandhurst, but when preliminary arrangements for the demonstration came to be made, it was found that the two towns more immediately interested in the matter-Castlemaine and Sandhurst-were each resolved to have the lion's share in the proceedings of the opening day." At that time, Castlemaine was the larger centre, half as large again as Sandhurst was, but Sandhurst promised "to prove worthy of itself on the occasion, and to make such a demonstration as would throw that of Castlemaine into the shade", and according to the report in the Argus on 22 October, 1862, "the promise so made was kept to the letter." Newspapers of the time carry wonderful, and lengthy, reports of both celebrations but they would take up way too much space here.

Next time, we hope to move on to the Sandhurst-Echuca line.

'Bye until then,

Marg O'Brien

ADVERTISING CHARGES BEING REVIEWED

We love to include your adverts in our Community Newspaper, but we are a not-for-profit organisation, we are totally self funded, producing this FREE paper for our Community.

Our current pricing structure has evolved over time, and has not been truly reflective of the costs. We are now in the process of reviewing ALL advertising rates (both casual and annual adverts). As part of this process, we will also be formalising current policies concerning discounts for not-for-profit groups, and other miscellaneous content.

A meeting will be scheduled in the coming months, to discuss the new charges and the rationale behind them. Advertisers and the general public will be invited to attend this meeting, and will be given opportunity to voice their ideas and opinions, prior to the charges coming into effect.

Our pricing is by all accounts "cheap" and we intend to keep them affordable, but unfortunately "The Locky News" is not subsidised, so we must cover our costs through advertising.

We will allow ample notice, advertising in two editions, leading up to the above mentioned meeting.

OFFICIAL OPENING

SUNDAY 15TH MARCH

Ron Iddles spent his early years on his parents dairy farm, on Hansen Road in Lockington, where he helped his father "Bill", milking 120 cows before school each day, and on the weekends carting hay and driving tractors. Ron attended Lockington Consolidated School, which in the day went right through to what is now year 10. When he left Lockington Consolidated School, he continued with his education at Echuca Technical School and after completing his secondary education, aged 18, became a police cadet. It is said that his interest in police work came from watching the long running local television drama series, "Homicide" (1964 – 1977).

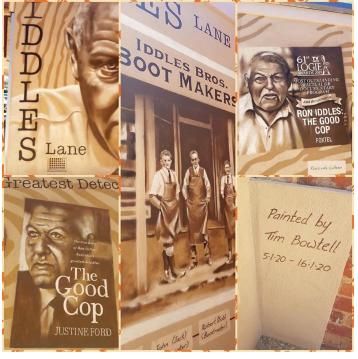

Ron is coming to Rochester to officially open Iddles Lane and the mural focused on the Iddles families of Rochester, at 11 am at the laneway in Gillies Street opposite IGA Supermarket. Artist Tim Bowtell, federal member Damian Drum MP, Ron Iddles OAM APM and Rochester Business Network President, Glenda Nichol will all take part in the official event.

At 2.30 at the CVCC at the Rochester Secondary College Ron will give one of his last speaking events on his homicide career. Graham Willis MC will then Interview Ron and his twin Barry Iddles, well known chef. An event not to be missed. Tickets at trybooking.com, Rochester Newsagency or at the door if not sold out prior. $32 per head includes a delicious afternoon tea served by the RSC parents club.

Iddles Lane memorabilia for sale, as well as a limited 100 signed copies of The Good Cop.

A ROLE TO PLAY

In rural communities such as ours, Community Groups play critical roles, not just as social gatherings of like minded people, but for way more important reasons.

Many in our community, work either on our own or in small groups, on farms or in small business, Social or Sporting Groups are often the most social interaction we get throughout our normal routines.

Our involvement in Community Groups isn't just for the I would like to encourage everyone in our Community to benefit of the group, it is often for the benefit of ourselves... our growth as individuals. Most people want to be part of a community because there is something incredibly lovely about being a part of a group of people who share something more substantial than just Those of you who are already involved in Social or geographical location.

Community Groups have the opportunity to take on quite important roles including, but certainly not limited to...

Business Wellbing.

Because so many of us work on our own or in small groups, we don't have a work group with whom we can brainstorm our ideas with, unless we turn to family and friends, or social contacts.

Mental Wellbeing.

Social interaction is an important factor for the mental health and well-being of everyone, ranging from children through older adults. This is especially important for those of us who live alone or in small family units.

Physical Wellbeing.

The physical act of getting out of our comfy chair in our lounge rooms, and getting out into the Community, for offer, and throw your support behind one of our great nothing more than a social outing, can be very beneficial Community Groups. for our physical health.

Family Wellbeing.

It is said that "it takes a Community to raise a child", it helps for parents and families to know that we are not alone. Social interactions can help encourage good social morals and behaviours, especially in single parent families.

Validation.

Every human needs some sort of validation, that we are worthy, and have a contribution to make.

be at least part of "something". No matter how large or small, playing a part in a bigger picture can make a huge impact on our lives.

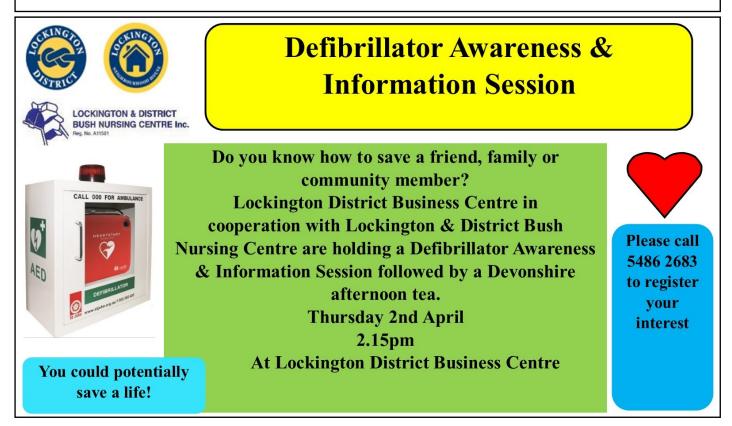

Sporting Groups... please encourage, include and validate newcomers to your groups. Without new members any group will become stagnant and ultimately collapse.

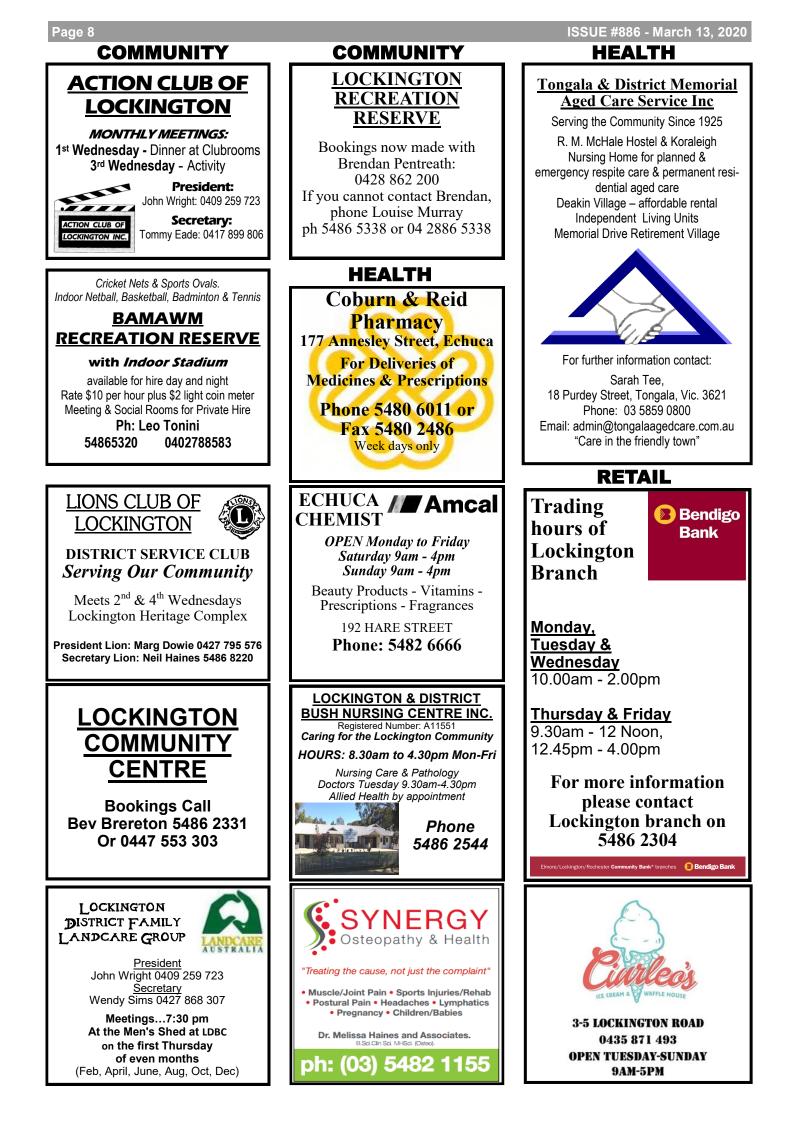

If you have kids, please take them to meetings, so they know how much effort and cooperation it takes for Community Groups to run smoothly and effectively. And group members, please don't ignore the kids, they need your encouragement, inclusion and validation just as much as the adults, these kids are the future of your group, so in some way, they are your most important members, as they have a lifetime of community support and involvement ahead of them.

Community Groups are true team environments, there is no room for selfish or biased views or actions. Please leave your own agendas at the door, and put your efforts behind what is good for your Community Group, or better still what's best for the Community in general.

Please consider your interests and the skills you have to

LOCKINGTON BOWLS CLUB REPORT

March 8: The women enjoyed fine conditions for their weekly Social bowls on Tuesday. Ann Lowrie and Heather Cheatley (s) a visitor from Finley were declared the winners after a solid performance on the green.

No pennant, no wins and no losses. The CVBD Midweek and Week-end Pennant Preliminary finals will be held this week.

Last Tuesday evening the club attracted 30 players in the Sports-night bowls with a lot of hidden talent on display. The winning team included some new faces as Finn Palmer, Peter Eade and Jeff Carnie (s) greeted the winners circle on 2 wins plus 10 shots. In second place was a trio of promising bowlers with Pat Millard, David Healy and Andrew Cochrane (s) 2 wins +9 shots. The final night of the series will be held this week.

On Saturday the game of Scrounge attracted a dozen bowlers to do battle. The individual winners were Neil Haines, Ian Johnson and Andrew Harris. The previous week, two left-handers in Russell Shawcross and Frank Chugg dominated.

In the club competitions Phillip Cunnington defeated Bill Musgrove in a quarter-final of the Presidents trophy 21 Up championship and claimed a berth in a semi-final. The 100 Up championship matches are a little behind, so members have a week to catch-up, otherwise a black pen may appear!

The B Grade championship is underway with Brian Kinnane accounting for a gallant Dave Thomas in a seesawing match-up. Kinnane is a finalist and will wait for the top half of the draw to be completed. Les Brereton is to play Leon Laffy and the winner of that game will meet David Blackburn in the semi-final.

The women have the 100 Up championship draw on display and the first round is to be completed soon.

The club will hold the annual Echuca Toyota Open Fours on Sunday 22nd March, commencing at 9.30am. Contact Chris Stewart 5486 2607 to enter. Spots are limited.

On Friday 27th March the women will conduct a Ladies Medley Fours starting at 10.00am. Contact Annie Haines 5486 8220 with entries.

Members are reminded to list names for the Saturday 4th April to play the visiting Vermont South Bowling Club members. Arrival at 12 noon for a 12.30pm game of bowls.
